

low to hi-fi:

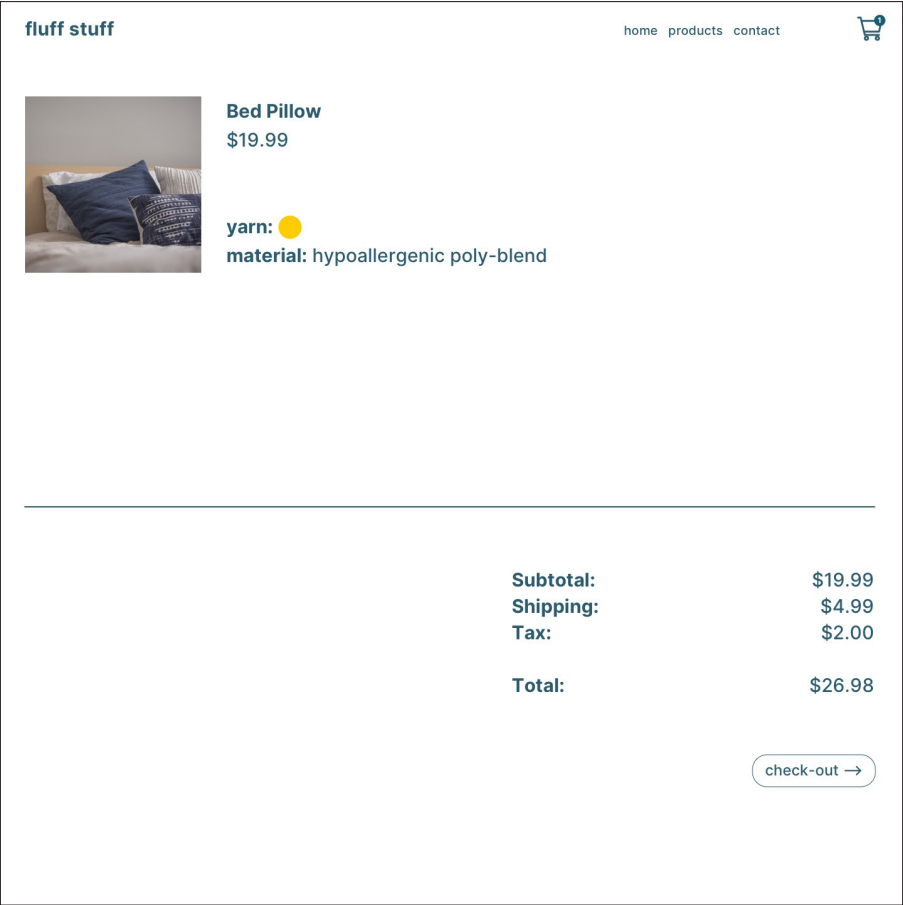

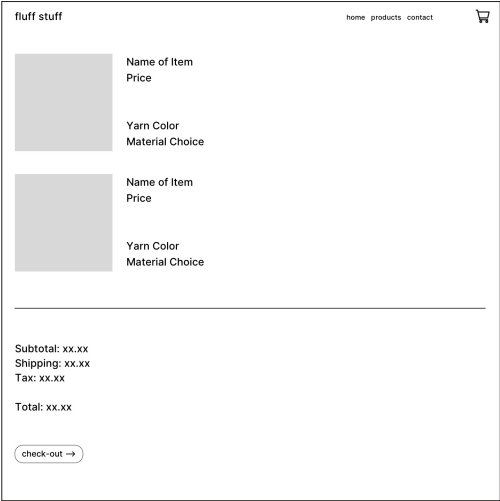

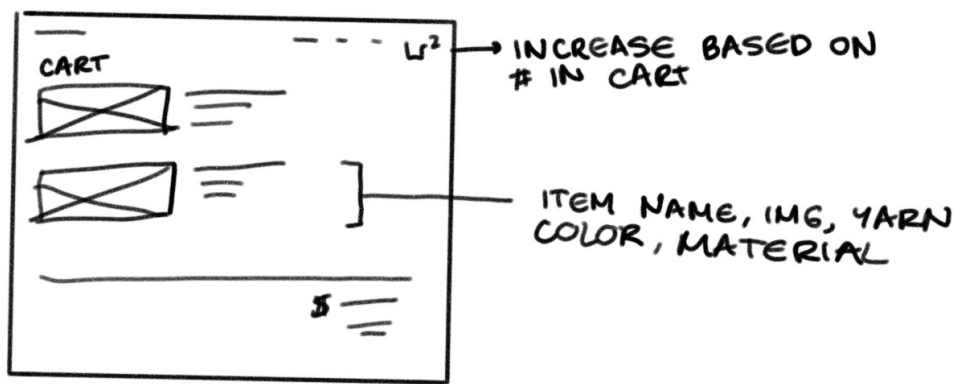

product page features

As I was planning on adding the add to cart functionality, I decided that it would make sense to help the user know when they can add an item, which would be possible only if the yarn and material had been chosen. To help the user know when this is possible, I decided to use color to mark the yarn choice. Because the material choice has a default option, both choices could be considered made, and the add to cart button would change color accordingly.

low to hi-fi:

shoppint cart page

For the cart page, I decided it would be important to have all of the information shown on the product detail page listed with the included item. I made sure to include the yarn and material choice along with the product name, image, and price so that it would be easier for the user to have confirmation that what they added was correct. Additionally, I added a section at the bottom which would add up the total price based off of the items in the cart.